PROPOSED JURY

Silvia Marieta
Realistic Artist
Tomar, Portugal

Silvia Marieta, figurative and realist painter was born in Lisbon, Portugal, in 1982. She began to paint from an early age, and always had the representation of the human figure as her favorite theme. In 2001 she went to the Faculty of Fine Arts from the University of Lisbon, in Portugal, to study painting and finished her degree in 2006; and was also in that same year that she first participated in an exhibition.

Starting from 2010 she joined to several Portuguese and Spanish associations of artists and began to participate more in collective exhibitions, national and international ones, with a few individuals on national soil. Currently resides in Tomar, Portugal and dedicates herself, whenever possible, to painting compositions with the human being as a highlight and commissioned portraits. And is still always trying to improve her knowledge of painting in workshops and doing some research, in books or in the internet.

PROPOSED JURY

Fiona Craig
 Fine Artist & Educator
 Chicago, Illinois

Fiona Craig is a fine artist and art teacher, painting flora, landscapes, still life and portraits. Her style is contemporary realism, in media oils, watercolours, acrylics, pastels, or mixed media. She enjoys travel and experiencing sights in the natural environment and botanical gardens first hand.

Fiona has exhibited in galleries, taught art to adults and children, and worked by commission for several decades. Her artworks are in private and public collections worldwide.

Artist's Statement

"My art is about beauty, or at least my perceptions of beauty, whether it be a fresh floral bloom or a weathered old tree. It may be unconventional beauty that does not conform to trends, symmetry, or the 'picturesque'. It may be the subtle kind that takes time and contemplation to appreciate. My artist's eye seeks and sees beauty everywhere.

While many of my artworks look photographic, and photography is as important as my visual memory is as a reference source, I do not try to duplicate the subject in precise botanical details, or hyper- or photo-realistic technique. I render my subjects with a degree of artistic licence, with colour variations, and brush / pencil stroke decisions apparent (not blended completely smooth). This is more obvious when seeing my paintings and drawings in person rather than on the computer screen. My aim is therefore to depict beauty in both subject matter and artistic technique.

Beauty brings balance and joy to my world, and I hope it does likewise for the viewer of my artworks. I am conscious of preserving a moment, expression, or season in time, as nature is ephemeral, constantly moving, changing and sometimes disappearing forever. Making art is my way of reacting passionately to what I enjoy seeing. The art-making process itself involves me in a second, closer experience of the subject I want to depict or record, constructing it from scratch on the canvas and moulding it to try to evoke my interpretation and experience of it. There is hard work and sometimes pain and frustration in the process, but there is also beauty in the 'alchemy' of mixing and applying colours and tones to a blank surface to bring up an image that makes visual sense and emotional response. The balance and joy my art brings to me is in the various processes as well as their results."

-- Fiona Craig, 2018

Art Classes: Fiona Craig is currently available to teach art classes and workshops at Evanston Art Center and Ice House Gallery, Evanston, Chicago. She is also planning upcoming workshops in Australia in 2019 (dates and venues TBA). See Classes page for details.
